Sat, November 16, 2024, 7:30 pm

Concert at 144 Cedar Street, Corning

(red brick UM Church - door on First St.)

“The best musical discovery of the year...stunningly powerful. Windborne sets a new bar for harmony singing today!” Brian O’Donovan, NPR

This concert will be a joyful and heartfelt celebration of song. Windborne’s lush vocals and unique arrangements bring light to a dark time, as they draw on midwinter music from folk, traditional and classical music from cultures in the US, British Isles and beyond. Unique from their typical show, the holiday spirit is accentuated with added instrumentation, from guitars and banjos to the Lithuanian Kanklės and Irish bodhran.

With Windborne as our guide across continents and centuries, the audience will be delighted by holiday stories, songs, and humor in a concert for all the generations! Sing along on a chorus, hear some interesting twists on old classics or sit back and enjoy discovering new but old favorites. Do not miss this unique Windborne concert of the Music of Midwinter!

Known for innovative arrangements, their harmonies are bold and unpredictably wonderful. With a 20-year background studying polyphonic music around the world, Lauren Breunig, Jeremy Carter-Gordon, Lynn Rowan, and Will Rowan share a vibrant energy onstage, shifting effortlessly between drastically different styles of music, illuminating the profound power and variation of the human voice. They are adherents to folk music’s longtime alliance with social activism, and movements that champion the oppressed and the disenfranchised. Windborne’s dynamic harmonies breathe new life into these songs.
